Reviews

Definitely one of the better book We have possibly read. We have read through and i also am certain that i am going to gonna study once again yet again in the foreseeable future. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

If we united religion, science and philosophy, what would it offer us? What would it offer us as a species? It may provide us with a means of coming to a consensus regarding what it is we believe we are and why it is we believe we exist. It was Carl Sagan who best expressed it when he said: We are privileged to influence and perhaps control our future. I believe we have an obligation to fight for others, who came before us, and to whom we are all beholden and for all those who, if we are wise enough, will come after. There is no cause more urgent, no dedication more fitting than to protect the future of our species. Nearly all our problems are made by humans and can be solved by humans. No social convention, no political system, no economic hypothesis, no religious dogma is more important. The means of developing such a consensus is through the development of a concept defined by Stephen Hawking as a universal philosophy. This universal philosophy could be achieved by using a process developed by Husserl: using bracketing and applying the process of reduction as outlined by Husserl. Bracketing is the process of eliminating any superfluous and irrelevant perceptions that are a part of our everyday lives until one is left with life's primary essentials. Reduction is the process of examining what remains, the primary essentials to make sense of one's intentionality. In short, it is Husserl's development of a process that helps us to develop Hawking's concept of a universal philosophy. It is the process of bracketing and reduction that helps us to formulate answers to the three basic questions: Where...
