Forgotten Books, 2018. Hardback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Transactions of the British Society for the Study of Orthodontics, 1921 There is little hope, I suppose, of being able to get an ideal school at once, but I should like to indicate what seem to me the lines upon which work should be started, and what should be aimed at. Eventually I hope to see a permanent school with its own clinic, at which students can obtain practical experience concurrently with and subsequent to the training in theory and technique. Financial difficulties and the initial uncertainty as to the number of students, put that put of court at present. Practical considerations point to a course of ten or twelve weeks. In planning a curriculum the central idea should be to give as sound a knowledge as possible of the principles, physiological and mechanical, on which orthodontic work is based. Our knowledge of these is limited indeed, but if we aim at teaching thoroughly what is known, and indicating the need for further study and the lines along which it should be made, we shall be rendering a far greater service...
